PASSED WITH HONOURS. George's Wife Speaks :- 'I had a letter from Amy to-day, George; the Ambulance Class exam. had just come off, and she wa feeling very nervous about it. No. I didn't go to any of the lectures while I was up i Naini : I went through the course in Simil ages ago, before I ever met you, so I did not care to bother about it again.

Did I never show you my certificate? I used to be so proud of it, I wonder where. it has gone to. . It's a big card, with the bodge on it like a hot-cross bun, saying that I am competent to render 'First Aid to the Injured,' and signed by three doctors. I ought to have it somewhere unless I cut it in two for packing photographs to send home : perhaps I did that. But the lectures were really great fun, though the Surgeon-Instructor, that was what he called himself, was very strict. Yes, indeed they were well attended all the bigwigs went, only ladies of course and aat in the front row; and when we got as far as bandaging they used to do it in order of precedence. It was a little unfair, for there was only one A.D.C. to bandage. and as you can't put on more than eight bandages at once, we girls had to do each other and it was rather dull.

people who were bandeged kept al. their clothes on: only if a girl was wearing a habit we made her do subject, it was so difficult to get those funny triangular rags fastened properly over fluffy frock. I never learnt anything about head bandages, because they spoilt one' fringe so : we all refused to have them on. *The poultice lesson was rather messy linaced and bread and pubby things lik that; I never remember if you put the water into the lingest or the linseed into the water, but if you get them well mixed together it can't matter much. Besides we never got a chance of practising, the Members of Council's wives were all so busy, and one would have thought they ought to it we learnt how to make poultices ages age! The best of it was that when they had made I was restored to good health. My son Arthur

"Good gracious, yes, of course the much use as practice. So they just showed | Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup and the result their poultices to the doctor, and he said they were going to take them home as patterms; only a wretched dog got in, before the end of the lecture, and ute them all up ! He did really, George, at least he did not finish all the linseed, and he left the mustard to the last, for that was what we heard him choking over: but he gobbled up the bread ones and the rags they were spread on too! I don't think I could endure a so exactly like roast beef. 'Yes, some of them used to say very absurd things. There was one lady, I can't remember her name, she had beautiful fair hair, when she was asked what she'd do in a case of snake hite, said she should the a ligature tightly round above it! Wasn't that ridiculous?

You don't see the joke? It seems very sensible to you? Why, George dear, ligalotion. said, and she meant ligature, wasn't the

I happen to have heard that everlastice saying about 'a little knowledge' before, but a little ignorance is much worse; and it's so nice to know about not holding up people's heads when they faint, and giving them brandy when they're bleeding to death, and that sort of thing. And it's most important about the normal temperature, and all that. · What? You don't believe I have a notion what the normal temperature is? Yes I have, it's 89. No. that's too much, we should always feel hot if it was that; it must be 60 or sixty samething. Well you value. Then there was the viva voce, two doctors, and they asked us one question each, and made us do a bandage. What was my question? Oh, | it was something about bones; I knew it then. Tibby and fibby, or names like that. Yes, that was it, tibia and fibula, they are in one's spine, aren't they ?

"I nearly got spun over my bandaging, though, Captain For just saved me. You remember Captain Foy, George, wasn't he handsome? Rather course looking? Oa no, trust one man not to almire another. He was very striking, and he had the most lovely dark eyes. . He wasn't supposed to care about girls,

I know, but he always need to dance with me, and he danced like a dream: I have never met such a perfect dancer before or since, and our steps suited beautifully ! 'You don't see that this has to do with ambulance? Now, George, you mustn't be jealous, I hadn't even seen you then. Well, they told me to do an arm sling, and poor Captain Foy was waiting very meekly in his undress uniform. I was awfully nervous, and as I stood on tiptue to get the thing round his neck he winspered, Tother way up!' So I turned the bandage, and did it all right, and they said it was very creditable. Of course he really knew more about it than any of us did, but I don't think he helped the others like that. 'Yes, we all passed, you can't wonder at it, for we had all worked so hard. It was a funny coincidence, when the list of marks came out the names were as nearly as possible in the order of precedence, but then, of course, they all sat in the front row.

Where did my name come? I lost a few marks over those tiresome old beer but tles, but I passed, passed with honours. What are you laughing at now, George ?-Pioneer Mail.

HE MIGHT HAVE ESCAPED ANY DAY. There was once a man, who, on account of his religious convictions, was arrested by a despotio government and thrown into prison. Looking at the slrong stone walls that shut him in, he naturally concluded that he must spend the rest of his days in this lonely and dismal place. Yet wrotched as the prospect was, there was some comfort in the thought- that he was a victim of oppression, and not undergoing punishment as a violator of any good and righteous law. All the same he would have been glad to get out, as he had a right to do if he could, Nevertheless there he stayed and languished for sixteen years. At nearly the end of that period it occurred to him one day to climb up on a projecting stone in the wall and take a peep through the window above his head. He did so, and found the iron hars removable and the sash not fastened. An idea struck him, of course. Why not escape? He opened the window, jumped six feet to the ground, and left that district immediately. He might have done so at any time during his protracted occupancy of the place, if he had only been blessed with a more inquiring mind and not taken so much for

Now here comes an incident both like and unlike that of the martyr; like it because there was loss of free action, uplike it because the sufferer was not imprisoued as he was. The story is in the form of a letter, one of thuse letters we all prefer to get-short and made up of ghort words. The writer, a lady, " For the last sixteen years I have been | Ports. greatly afflicted with bilious complaints and weaktiess. I was always tired, weak, and lowspirited. I had no appetite, and when food was placed before me I could not touch it. For days I could scarcely est anything. At times I was troubled with sickness and heaving at the required. stomach, spitting up a thick phlegm. I had a troublesome cough, with pain at my chest and difficulty of breathing I got very weak and could scarcely drag myself in and out of the shop. In December, 1891, I began to take a medicine I had heard well spoken of by many of my customers, called Mother Seiger's Carative Syrop. After I had taken only a few doses I felt relief, and I had not used the medicine for a formight when I fell better then I had done for years. Thus encouraged, I kept on with it until them there was nobody to try them on fir bad and red off and on for a year from pain and even an A. D. C. wouldn't like a poultice | heaviness after meals, with a staking feeling at put on outside his coat, and it wouldn't be the pit of the stomach. He was induced to try several persons in this district who have been cured by the Syrup after all other means had failed. You are at file sty to publish my letter if you think it might be of benefit to others afflicted as I was. Yours traly, (signed) (Mrs.) M. Ward, 174, Ilkeston Road, Radford, Nottingham, April 1st, 1892.' We congratulate Mrs. Ward upon her deliverance from a distressing and dangerous disease. What a pily she did not sooner learn how essily mustard plaster if I was really ill, it smells and certainly she could be cured. Sixteen years is too large a slice out of one's life to be spont in hodily and mental misery. Very few of us can have wealth in any case, but health should be a blessing common and universal as sunshine. And it might be if everybody knew how to preserve it when they possess it, or to regain it when lost. This lady's disease was of the aigestive organs-indigestion and dyspepsiathe most afflictive and perilous of all berause it involves every function of the body, scattering its poison at every point through the med um of ture is stuff you pour out of a bottle, like the blood.
